“ So many memories have come to mind these last couple of days. Too many really to post here. Dad loved a good martini, a good poker game and a good joke. He had his sense of humor up to the very end. He was a strong, loving father. As the youngest child I got to have him all to myself for several years. We took annual trips to Cedar Point each Summer and lots of trips up north. Weekends at home were usually spent in the back yard at the pool. The day I got my braces put on he thought it would be nice to have pizza as a treat. I could only suck the cheese off the top. There was chewing happening that day. The phrase that I will never forget when he was teaching me to drive is: “You can’t stop on a dime.” He always felt I waited too long to start braking for stop signs or red lights. So there is a few. I hope to hear many more from friends and family as we celebrate his life on Tuesday.
